

Weekly Learning Reflections

Here we are at the end of the penultimate week of this half term and the time has flown by. It was lovely to see so many of you at the open morning on Tuesday and I hope you enjoyed seeing your child's work and them taking you through what they are proud of.

Our journey into the Jungle Book has continued this week with the children exploring character and setting descriptions. We have looked at the language used and identified powerful vocabulary for us to use in our own writing. The children have also looked at a variety of different types of settings and character descriptions and have analysed them to determine the best examples.

In Maths we have continued to explore addition and subtraction with the children focusing on formal methods of calculation. They have shown great understanding of column method and have used it with good accuracy. It has been great to see children using dienes and other resources to help with their calculations as well.

Throughout the rest of the week, the children have explored modern day versions of the "Good Samaritan" story and created their own storyboards about these versions. They have also looked at a range of emotions through PSHE and thought about how people behave when they are feeling certain ways.

Thea was chosen for being a good friend and her dedication towards her work. The children have recognised her determination to do her best and also her ability to use resources to help her achieve her goals independently. Well done Thea!

Teacher Star of the Week - ★ Ethan ★

This week I have chosen Ethan as my Star of the Week. Ethan always shows a good attitude towards his learning and he is also a great collaborator. He has worked with enthusiasm and challenged himself to achieve his best. Well done Ethan!
